Dear Vern:

Just a note in a hurry to tell you what I did today. A young man came in to the office enroute from the east to the San Francisco area. He was especially desirous of contacting others who knew about and believed The URANTIA Book.

He inquired if we had any literature to give further information about the "origin" of the book. When I explained that we did not have, he took it in stride and seemed to understand that the "truth" of the book had to stand on its own merit, whatever the source.

Because he seemed "bright" without being fanatical I had the temerity to give him your name and address! And for that I must assume all blame or(?) praise.

His name is Kevin C. Kennedy, and of course he as yet has no address, but hopes to remain in that area. I trust that I have been wise in my judgment of him, and that I have in no way added to your many responsibilities.

My love and personal greetings to all in your "family."

Sincerely,

Anne Rawson
