Dear Jim:

Thank you for your letter and your interest in the School. In answer to your questions, I am sending you a copy of an article about the School which will soon be published in the Planetary Prints newsletter. I am also enclosing a brochure on the School, and will send the Garrick's several brochures as well.

Clyde Bedell is here with us today, stopping off in Boulder on his way back to California from attending the memorial service which was held for Christie in Chicago. He is having difficulty selling his home in California. So we do not know at this time when he may return to Boulder in order to begin compiling another edition of the Concordex.

Our love and best wishes to all of you in Ontario who rejoice in sharing the illuminating gift of this epochal revelation in an otherwise confused world.

Peace and Blessings,

John D. Hay

John; Good buddy of mine, Christel Garrick, was saving a brochure about the school for Urantia Book students so I could get a look at it. But when I dropped in to visit the Garricks the other day someone else had borrowed the brochure.

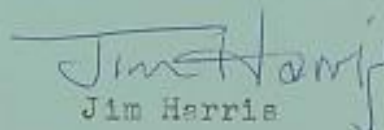

So Christel suggested I write to you anyway to ask for information on the school. She also asked me to ask you to send along more brochures for the interested.

For how long has this project been operating?
Am I correct in using the term "school"? Is there a formal structure, or some forum of learning patterned on something we read about in the Urantia Book?
What kind of background are students expected to have?
What is the cost? (or, as they say on the east coast of Australia: Emma Chisit?)

On quite another subject, maybe -
I also hear, via Garrick's Grarevine (gee! I hope that term doesn't get to be too public) that Clyde Bedell is in Boulder and is at work on another edition of The Concordex. I am wondering if he needs assistance in any editorial capacity, especially indexing or proofreading, but also editing, as it seems to me that is a massive project.

I am a freelancer with various editorial skills. I was thinking that if I ever got to come to that school, I could possibly give a hand, in a volunteer capacity, of course.

good wishes and sincerely

Jim Harris
