Dear Steve,

Our program has taken shape enough that I can give you the summary you asked for. I don't know how long you want it to be so if this is too long, just cut some of it.

FORGING A RELATIONSHIP WITH GOD THROUGH PRAYER, WORSHIP AND COMMUNION

M-2-5

Prayer, worship and communion are a primary means by which we establish and maintain our personal relationship with God. Our loving service flows from this friendship with our Father. Therefore, personal ministry begins with prayer, worship and communion.

For our workshop we have tried to select the information about the ways of communicating with God which would be most helpful to anyone desiring to enrich his prayer life. We will cover the four essential elements in talking to God, the two rules which God observes when responding to us, and the five most powerful things we can do to enhance our receptivity to God's responses.

We have also devised some exercises which we hope will give everyone a fresh perspective on communicating with our heavenly Father.

Hope this summary will do the trick. Thank you for sending the list of people who are coming. We ended up deciding against group leaders which require any advance preparation. The small groups we plan can be lead by anyone in the group.

We will start off with the whole group together for the first hour or so. Bill and I will both speak and there will be a question-and-answer session afterward. After the break we will divide into two groups, one lead by Bill and one by me. We will each need access to a blackboard and chalk at that time. Then we will move back into the large group to divide into many small groups all functioning in one room. The very end will also be large group.

When you mentioned the meditation, we asked John and Dianne Lanford if they might be able to come so that John could perform it. They have just told us that his work schedule just isn't going to allow it. One of these days we hope to get it on good quality tape and have copies available, but that isn't feasible now. So no meditation.

Carol Hay contacted us about the plans for Thursday and I sent our suggestions yesterday.

We're looking forward to a great week. See you soon.

Love,
Kaye
