Dear Neal:

I have received the Project Outlines in good order, and sincerely wish to thank you for sending them. It will take me a few weeks to go through the material that you have so skillfully compiled, and I will be getting in touch with you then.

We believe even now, however, that your devotion to this project will surely produce as fine a translation of The URANTIA Book into Chinese as is humanly possible. Needless to say, I would consider it a great privilege to assist you in this project in any way that I can. There can be no doubt that the project is eminently fundable. In this connection it would be very helpful if you would put together a projected annual budget for the project including:

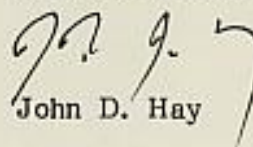

1. Your salary requirements.
2. Projected consultant fees.
3. Travel and moving expenses.
4. Equipment (We have begun pricing the Wang equipment you mentioned, but any information you can supply will be helpful).
5. Office supplies and library materials.
6. Other projected expenses.

I thought you might like to see a copy of the seminar schedule for this semester (enclosed), which we recently sent out to the regional mailing list.

Merritt sends his greetings and encouragement. (He's spent the last week pouring over your outline.)

Thank you again, Neal. I know that history itself and the angels will commend you for the efforts that you have undertaken for the sake of the Chinese people of Urantia.

Peace & Blessings,

John D. Hay
